SINGAPORE: The National University of Singapore (NUS) and the Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) have jointly appointed macroeconomist Professor Andrew Rose as the MAS Term Professor in Economics and Finance for a period of two months from May 25.

Professor Rose, who is the BT Rocca Jr Professor of International Business at the Haas School of Business at the University of California, Berkeley, will be hosted by NUS Business School during the term of the Professorship, said MAS and NUS in a joint media release on Friday (May 22).

First established in 2009, the MAS Term Professorship in Economics and Finance is awarded to distinguished scholars, who are appointed as Visiting Professors at both NUS Business School and the Department of Economics in the NUS Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, said MAS and NUS.

According to MAS and NUS, Professor Rose is a world renowned scholar in international finance, macroeconomics, and trade. They added that he is a prolific researcher with more than 160 academic publications in top economic and finance journals.

Professor Rose was the founding director of the Haas Clausen Center for International Business and Policy, and the NUS Risk Management Institute. In addition, he has consulted with the International Monetary Fund, World Bank, Asian Development Bank, Bank of Japan, and the MAS.

"We are excited to welcome Professor Rose back to NUS Business School. His generous guidance and deep insights into monetary policy, systemic risks, and capital markets have helped us stay at the forefront of related research," said Professor Bernard Yeung, Dean and Stephen Riady Distinguished Professor of NUS Business School.

Mr Edward Robinson, Assistant Managing Director (Economic Policy) and Chief Economist at MAS, said: "We have benefitted tremendously from Andrew's insights in his previous visits to Singapore and the MAS, and are pleased that he has been appointed as the MAS Term Professor."

Professor Rose will deliver a public lecture at NUS Business School on Jun 11, during which he will share his insights on the relationship between inflation and domestic bond markets. He will also meet with faculty members, advise students on their research, and share his latest scholarly findings at seminars and workshops. At the MAS, he will engage senior policymakers, economists and analysts, on recent developments in international macroeconomics and finance.

Professor Rose will also participate actively in the Annual Conference of the Asian Bureau of Finance and Economic Research (ABFER), including being the moderator of the keynote address to be delivered by Professor Reinhart Carmen of the Harvard Kennedy School during the joint ABFER and Asian Monetary Policy Forum dinner on May 28.
