

NUS launches new school to promote lifelong learning opportunities

JUN 17, 2016 1:35 PM

[SINGAPORE] Singapore's education system is increasingly expanding the pathways in its Institutes of Higher Learning for people to develop mastery in diverse areas of interest, said acting minister for Education (Higher Education and Skills) Ong Ye Kung on Friday.

As such, all five autonomous universities will be setting up centres dedicated to lifelong learning, said Mr Ong, who was speaking at the launch of the new School for Continuing and Lifelong Education at the National University of Singapore (NUS).