General

1. Do all returning NSmen have to register early and attend classes during the Special Term?

No, Special Term classes are purely optional. The arrangements are put in place to reduce the waiting time for returning NSmen to begin their classes earlier. The registration period for Returning NSmen for Special Term modules is from 1 February to 1 March yearly.

2. Will returning NSmen who attend Special Term classes be able to graduate one semester earlier?

Returning NSmen will be able to graduate one semester earlier should he take as many modules during the Special Term as he would in a regular semester (or offset any shortfall by taking more modules in other semesters). Students must however be cognisant that overstretching themselves over a short period of time during the Special Term, right after National Service, may not suit everyone. They should seek academic advice from their respective faculties before they decide to take on as many modules as they would in a regular semester for the Special Term.

Students who are enrolled in degree courses that are not on a modular curriculum structure (i.e. NUS Medicine, Dentistry and Law) will not be able to graduate earlier.

3. What should a returning NSman do if he wishes to drop any Special Term modules for which he has registered for?

The returning NSman has to complete the Academic Profile Updates \(APU\) Form and send it to the Registrar's Office via email to nghelp@nus.edu.sg. Students who decide to drop all modules will be deemed to have withdrawn from the programme. Please note the fee policy that will be applicable for dropping modules within the stipulated timeline stated here.

Eligibility

4. Will full-time national servicemen who are expected to complete NS after the start of the Special Term be allowed to disrupt NS to register early?

No, the early registration for Special Term is intended for those who are enlisted in the December and March National Service intakes and would otherwise have to wait for a long time to enter university as they would be matriculating as undergraduate students only in the coming July/August.

5. Will returning NSmen who wish to re-apply to NUS for another course be able to register early to attend Special Term classes?

Yes, Returning NSmen can register early to attend Special Term classes if they wish to re-apply to NUS for another course. However, they should register for modules that meet the University Level Requirements and not the core modules, so that these modules they register for can satisfy their new course requirements, if their application for the new course is successful.

Module Selection & Application

6. Is there a limit to the number of Special Term modules that a student can register?

Generally, students are well advised to take not more than two modules per part of the Special Term.

7. Can returning NSmen choose to register for modules for only one part instead of both parts of the Special Term (i.e. either Part I or Part II)?

Yes, but students should make this decision with the understanding that they may not be able to graduate a semester earlier if they have not completed the requisite academic requirements.

8. What are the modules that returning NSmen can register?

The list of modules is available on this website.

Returning NSmen, however, are to check the pre-requisites for the modules they would like to take before registering for the modules. They can refer to the online NUS Bulletin for information on the modules. For further enquiries on curriculum matters, returning NSmen should approach their undergraduate home faculty to clarify.

Please refer to the timetable builder here for details on the class and examination timetable (lecture, tutorial and laboratories if any).

9. How can returning NSmen register for the modules?

Returning NSmen can register for the modules that they wish to read through the Non-Graduating Students Application System. Please read this set of application instructions before applying.
