

PAYING KNIT FORWARD

When the circuit breaker period was extended in May, National University of Singapore undergraduate Cherie Poon was worried that the momentum of public donations would decline after a rousing first wave.

Putting her knitting skills to good use, she launched a fund-raising project selling hand-knitted coasters and raised a total of $920.

Ms Poon, 22, split the proceeds equally between the #HOMEFORALL migrants initiative, which focuses on food, hygiene and Internet connectivity for migrant workers, and Food Bank Singapore.
