

Centre to focus on children's physical and mental health

A new research centre set up by Lien Foundation and National University of Singapore medical school will study how best to improve the physical and mental health of young children.

The Centre for Holistic Initiatives for Learning and Development or Child will bring together experts from across a range of disciplines, including health, education, sociology, psychology, artificial intelligence and data analytics.