Wong Kim Hoh

Deputy Life Editor

It is not your usual hospital fare. But one thing, there is a certain fill-in, fill-in, fill-in. There is also an activity centre, where vegetables and snacks are well-served, and even arts and crafts. There are no normal medical settlements, no usual medical procedures. Everything is different here.

Welcome to Ward 81 at St Luke’s Hospital, a one-of-a-kind community hospital in Singapore to set up a dementia ward within the campus. The ward is designed to meet the specific needs of people with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is in the run-up to the International Dementia Awareness Month in October, with a focus on raising awareness and providing support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward provides services such as medical and nursing care, social work, activity program, and day care services. The goal is to provide comprehensive care and support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is equipped with facilities such as a day care centre, a garden, and a relaxation area. It also offers a range of activities including music therapy, art classes, and exercise classes.

The ward aims to create a supportive environment that respects the individuality and dignity of people with dementia. The team of healthcare professionals includes doctors, nurses, social workers, and volunteers.

The ward provides services such as medication management, physical therapy, speech therapy, and occupational therapy. It also offers support groups and educational programs for caregivers.

The ward is set up with the goal of improving the quality of life for people with dementia and their caregivers. It is a place where people with dementia can receive the care they need, and where caregivers can learn and support each other.

Wong Kim Hoh

Deputy Life Editor

It is not your usual hospital fare. But one thing, there is a certain fill-in, fill-in, fill-in. There is also an activity centre, where vegetables and snacks are well-served, and even arts and crafts. Everything is different here.

Welcome to Ward 81 at St Luke’s Hospital, a one-of-a-kind community hospital in Singapore to set up a dementia ward within the campus. The ward is designed to meet the specific needs of people with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is in the run-up to the International Dementia Awareness Month in October, with a focus on raising awareness and providing support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward provides services such as medical and nursing care, social work, activity program, and day care services. The goal is to provide comprehensive care and support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is equipped with facilities such as a day care centre, a garden, and a relaxation area. It also offers a range of activities including music therapy, art classes, and exercise classes.

The ward aims to create a supportive environment that respects the individuality and dignity of people with dementia. The team of healthcare professionals includes doctors, nurses, social workers, and volunteers.

The ward provides services such as medication management, physical therapy, speech therapy, and occupational therapy. It also offers support groups and educational programs for caregivers.

The ward is set up with the goal of improving the quality of life for people with dementia and their caregivers. It is a place where people with dementia can receive the care they need, and where caregivers can learn and support each other.

Wong Kim Hoh

Deputy Life Editor

It is not your usual hospital fare. But one thing, there is a certain fill-in, fill-in, fill-in. There is also an activity centre, where vegetables and snacks are well-served, and even arts and crafts. Everything is different here.

Welcome to Ward 81 at St Luke’s Hospital, a one-of-a-kind community hospital in Singapore to set up a dementia ward within the campus. The ward is designed to meet the specific needs of people with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is in the run-up to the International Dementia Awareness Month in October, with a focus on raising awareness and providing support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward provides services such as medical and nursing care, social work, activity program, and day care services. The goal is to provide comprehensive care and support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is equipped with facilities such as a day care centre, a garden, and a relaxation area. It also offers a range of activities including music therapy, art classes, and exercise classes.

The ward aims to create a supportive environment that respects the individuality and dignity of people with dementia. The team of healthcare professionals includes doctors, nurses, social workers, and volunteers.

The ward provides services such as medication management, physical therapy, speech therapy, and occupational therapy. It also offers support groups and educational programs for caregivers.

The ward is set up with the goal of improving the quality of life for people with dementia and their caregivers. It is a place where people with dementia can receive the care they need, and where caregivers can learn and support each other.

Wong Kim Hoh

Deputy Life Editor

It is not your usual hospital fare. But one thing, there is a certain fill-in, fill-in, fill-in. There is also an activity centre, where vegetables and snacks are well-served, and even arts and crafts. Everything is different here.

Welcome to Ward 81 at St Luke’s Hospital, a one-of-a-kind community hospital in Singapore to set up a dementia ward within the campus. The ward is designed to meet the specific needs of people with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is in the run-up to the International Dementia Awareness Month in October, with a focus on raising awareness and providing support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward provides services such as medical and nursing care, social work, activity program, and day care services. The goal is to provide comprehensive care and support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is equipped with facilities such as a day care centre, a garden, and a relaxation area. It also offers a range of activities including music therapy, art classes, and exercise classes.

The ward aims to create a supportive environment that respects the individuality and dignity of people with dementia. The team of healthcare professionals includes doctors, nurses, social workers, and volunteers.

The ward provides services such as medication management, physical therapy, speech therapy, and occupational therapy. It also offers support groups and educational programs for caregivers.

The ward is set up with the goal of improving the quality of life for people with dementia and their caregivers. It is a place where people with dementia can receive the care they need, and where caregivers can learn and support each other.

Wong Kim Hoh

Deputy Life Editor

It is not your usual hospital fare. But one thing, there is a certain fill-in, fill-in, fill-in. There is also an activity centre, where vegetables and snacks are well-served, and even arts and crafts. Everything is different here.

Welcome to Ward 81 at St Luke’s Hospital, a one-of-a-kind community hospital in Singapore to set up a dementia ward within the campus. The ward is designed to meet the specific needs of people with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is in the run-up to the International Dementia Awareness Month in October, with a focus on raising awareness and providing support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward provides services such as medical and nursing care, social work, activity program, and day care services. The goal is to provide comprehensive care and support for people living with dementia and their caregivers.

The ward is equipped with facilities such as a day care centre, a garden, and a relaxation area. It also offers a range of activities including music therapy, art classes, and exercise classes.

The ward aims to create a supportive environment that respects the individuality and dignity of people with dementia. The team of healthcare professionals includes doctors, nurses, social workers, and volunteers.

The ward provides services such as medication management, physical therapy, speech therapy, and occupational therapy. It also offers support groups and educational programs for caregivers.

The ward is set up with the goal of improving the quality of life for people with dementia and their caregivers. It is a place where people with dementia can receive the care they need, and where caregivers can learn and support each other.